Loyola School of Music Celebrates 100 Years of Music in New Orleans!

This is a special year for Loyola’s award-winning School of Music. 2019 marks 100 years since Dr. Ernest Schuyten founded the New Orleans Conservatory of Music and Dramatic Art, which was eventually incorporated into Loyola University in 1932. We have been providing excellence in musical performance to the people of New Orleans for 100 years! We are proud of that heritage and are so delighted that you are here to share in this celebration season with us.

As you will see from the program tonight, music cannot exist in a vacuum. The cycle of composition/creation, performance, and reception requires YOU, our audience, to complete the communication flow. We appreciate your support of our faculty artists, student musicians, and guest performers through your presence and your gifts. We’ve been able to provide music like the performance you’re hearing today because of generous donors, scholarship endowments, and financial gifts through the years. If you like what you hear, if you’d like to support this valuable resource for student education and community enrichment, please consider a donation to the School of Music. You can donate by visiting giving.loyno.edu/montage
